Law firms of all sizes are facing new obstacles around data security and integrity. The legal industry is not held to direct terms of compliance relative to data security; however, many of the industries attorneys support are faced with these requirements, and they are extending liability and terms of compliance to representing firms. Reliance on information technology and utilization of electronic record systems make it more challenging than ever before to secure and protect your clients' information, and to comply with complex privacy regulations. Warren Averett Technology Group offers the following services:

Today's business software solutions are diverse and complex, with wide-ranging features and capabilities. It is virtually impossible to clearly compare alternatives without a robust, rigorous and well-documented selection process. Are you looking for an on premise solution, a hosted solution or perhaps a Software as a Service (SaaS) solution? At Warren Averett Technology Group we have an 'agnostic' approach to software selection. We want you to implement the best solution possible for your business. We perform carefully planned demonstrations, which are controlled so software can be effectively compared and ranked by your in-house selection team. Software and hardware costs, implementation and training costs, as well as ongoing maintenance and support costs, must all be included in an intensive cost-and-benefit analysis. Warren Averett Technology Group's software due diligence process helps uncover technical risks while shielding intellectual property details. We analyze the software's code, design, technology and development sophistication to help you select the solution that best fits your firm's needs.
